

Happy Easter from the Carrot Patch!

Greetings from the Carrot Patch!

Things are hippity-hoppity busy here. The chocolate factory is pumping overtime, and the marshmallow bunnies are shooting down the assembly line. Rhonda Rabbit is ordering all the bunnies about in the egg decorating class. She wants every egg simply perfect. But to me, the best eggs are those that turn out just a little bit different.

Oh, all the bunnies are so excited. Hop, hop, they go, through the carrot patch, down to the meadow to pick flowers to dye the eggs. Then out to the chicken coops to gather the eggs. Ramona Rabbit takes her egg-decorating duties very seriously. First she dips the eggs into the color vats, swirling them to create tie-dye designs. Then she glues on the glitter--lots and lots of glitter!--and lace too. And ribbons and buttons and ruffles and beads. Each egg is a masterpiece.

Me, I just love a plain, old hard-boiled egg. So tasty! Almost as good as a nice fresh carrot. But a basket of eggs in all the colors of the rainbow is a sight that warms my heart.

Are you going to decorate eggs for Easter this year? Rosie Rabbit goes sticker-crazy with hers! Instead of dyeing her eggs, she plasters on sticker after sticker after sticker. Which makes it almost impossible to eat the egg! But they do look pretty. Everyone has a different way of decorating their eggs, and I love them all!

It doesn't matter at all how you decorate an Easter egg, as long as you have fun doing it.

Well, I'd better get hopping over to the Egg Design Workshop and see what new creations the bunnies have come up with today. Easter is right around the corner. Soon it will be time for me to hop on down the bunny trail, straight to your house. And I do so love to visit you! But you won't see me. And no peeking! Until then, have fun. Maybe you could leave some Easter eggs out for me? I get awfully hungry hopping around the world.

Love,

The Easter Bunny
